SOME POINTS ON SILVER.

Questions Answered in the Light of Facts And Reason.

Cincinnati Inquirer: We are asked to answer these questions.

1. Did the government take gold out of the treasury to buy silver bullion under the Sherman law, or did it issue in payment silver or gold certificates?

Answer. The government did neither. It bought the bullion at the lowest market price and gave in payment Treasurer's notes payable in lawful money.

2. Were the government bonds made payable in gold, or could they be paid in silver?

Answer. Not a single bond of any issue, under any law, was made payable in either gold or silver by name. Every one of them was payable in coin, and coin consisted of both gold and silver.

When the bonds were refunded it was distinctly stated that they were payable in coin and that the weight and fineness of the coin should be in accordance with the coinage act of July, 1870. The act of 1870 provided for the issue of both gold and silver coin, distinctly defining the weight and fineness of every dollar. The only question was, who shall decide, the holder of the bond, or the government what kind of coin shall be used in redemption.

Those who favored maintaining the parity of the gold and silver coins claimed that the government had the option to pay in that which was most convenient. The bankers and bondholders claimed that it was their exclusive right to say what kind of coin they would receive.

The advocates of the single gold standard have induced our government officials of both political parties to take position with the bankers and to maintain that all obligation to pay money for the redemption of bonds, treasury notes and greenbacks must be paid in gold.

As only eight millions of silver dollars had ever been coined, and fearing that there might be an adverse decision, a confederation of rats, foreign and domestic, entered into a conspiracy to drop the coinage of silver, which would leave no redemption money but gold. Eight millions of silver dollars would cut no figure in redeeming a thousand millions of government obligations.

3. Was silver dropped from coinage and thus demonetized, because the leading commercial nations of the world had demonetized it?

Answer—Certainly not. That is a lie of the first magnitude. England demonetized silver in 1816. The next "leading nation" to follow the example of England was the United States in 1873, Germany and France followed the United States within a year. If the United States re-entrances silver Germany, France and the Latin Union will correct the blunder of following the bad example we set them by the rascally act of 1873. It is admitted by the greatest English statesman that if the United States must recognize it or lose her most valuable trade.

A patron of the Enquirer asks "whether we would have more money per capita than is needed if silver is coined free of charge in unlimited quantities."

Certainly not for several reasons. If the American mints were run to their full capacity the volume of gold and silver available for coinage would not increase as fast as our population and the enlarged business requirements. The gold product is and has been for years in excess of our silver product in their coinage ratio. A thousand dollars worth of gold bullion is produced at less cost than a thousand dollars worth of silver bullion. Silver has not declined in its commercial value because of increased production, but because of being deprived of its money function. If its use as money was restored its value relatively to the place it occupied when it was denied access to the mints. If every ton of silver obtained from the American mints not wanted in manufactures and the arts was converted into coin it would be many years before the people of the United States would have as large per capita circulation of silver as the people of France have today. The statement that there has been an abnormal production of silver is accepted by many as true, when it is a blistering falsehood. France is smaller in area than some of our states, and has a population of about 30,000,000, with a very small annual increase. She has $700,000,000 in silver, or about $23 per head. The United States has a vast territory, sparsely settled, a population of 70,000,000, with a fabulous annual increase, and a per capita of about $6. Silver is needed especially as a money of redemption. To require gold to be the redeemer of all the paper currency and of all the silver is like building a pyramid upon its apex. It is only a question of time when the structure will become a ruin.

With all the gold and silver available the volume of credit money absolutely essential, will be too large to be sustained on such a small foundation. To disfranchise silver and impose upon gold the duty which had hitherto been performed by both metals is absurd and impossible. Thence our fathers were wise in providing for the coinage of both metals as primary money. There is not on the globe a country which needs as much money per capita as the United States, and there is no civilized country that has so little. To deprive one half of our constitutional money of its money function is an act of folly and madness which if persisted in will in the strong language of Secretary Carlisle produce more disaster than have attended war, pestilence and famine. We are approaching a fearful crisis which can only be averted by the full enfranchisement of silver.

Still Another Argument for the gold Standard.

Salem Statesman: We have little news of importance from Hon. E. Hoefler. He is in attendance at both conventions of the sons of noise, with his sixteen proxies for each, but he cannot make himself heard. He has talked a great deal, but not a word of his has been distinguished. He might as well try to whisper against a Kansas cyclone. We are very sorry that he forgot to take a callopie.

It isn't much trouble for a really healthy man to be good humored. Jollity and exuberant health are a proverbial combination. The hearty man who is always laughing doesn't have any trouble with his digestion. It has been said that laughing makes people healthy. The truth is that health makes people laugh.

There isn't any other thing so essential to health as regularity in the action of the bowels. Most all sickness starts with some derangement of the digestive functions. Good digestion means good, pure blood, and that means strength. Once let the bowels become clogged with refuse matter, and the whole system is deranged. Impure, poisonous matter gets into the blood and plants the seeds for all sorts of sickness. Whenever there is a stoppage of the intestinal action, help should be given immediately. Usually a mild, gentle laxative is all that is necessary. A violent, wrenching, gripping cathartic is never needed. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are the most pleasant and successful remedy for occasional or chronic constipation, or costiveness. They are tiny, sugar-coated anti-bilious granules that even the smallest child can easily take. They act in perfect accord with nature and produce no griping or other disagreeable feeling. They should be taken at the first indication of digestive trouble. They stop sour stomach, belching, "heart-burn," flatulence and sick headache. They cure constipation permanently. You can stop taking them after the bowels are thoroughly regulated. Their help lasts. You do not become a slave to their use as with other pills.
